

Multi-Quote

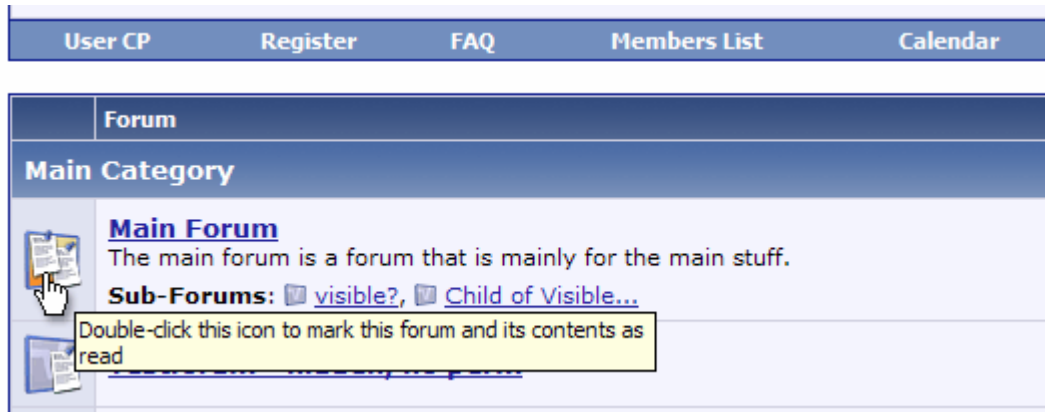

The much-requested multi-quote feature allows users to tag multiple posts that they wish to respond to by clicking a small button on each post. Once the user clicks the reply button, each tagged post is quoted.

To increase usability, by default, only posts within the current thread are automatically quoted. If you wish to quote posts in other threads with multi-quote, you simply need to click a link on the reply page, and the text of those posts will be added without a reload.

Mark Forums Read with AJAX

If you wish to mark a forum read, you can simply click its status icon on the index page and the change will be processed without a reload. You can even mark individual sub-forums as read in the same way.

Quote Tags Link to Quoted Post

When quoting a post, the ID of the post is automatically included with the [quote] tag. When the quoted text is viewed in a thread, a small icon links back to the quoted post.

Example:

Options Backup and Restore

If you have ever tried to setup a test board before making changes to your real board, you have probably run into the problem of trying to move your option changes from the test board to the live board. Now, you can backup your options to an XML format and restore them to any other board. Options that might cause problems if moved (such as the cookie path and domain) are automatically skipped from the backup/restore process.

Private Message Preview in Notification Emails

If you have elected to receive emails when receiving a new private message, the email will now contain more than just the name of the user who sent you the message. The title and body of the message will be included. Any BB codes in the message will automatically be converted to an equivalent plaintext version using the new plaintext bbcode parser.

Example output might look like this:

Quote:

Dear Mike,

You have received a new private message at Test Forums from admin, entitled "Demo Private Message".

This is the message that was sent:

This is a demo private message with bold text.

To read the original version, respond to this message, or delete the message, you must log in here:

All the best,

Message previews in thread subscription emails also include the improved plaintext representation.

Auto-Resize Oversized Image Attachments

If a user attaches an image that has dimensions larger than the administrator allows, the image will automatically be resized to fit. This is similar to the auto-resizing of avatars that vBulletin 3.5 performed.

'Reason for Editing' Available on Quick Edit

You may now include a reason for editing without having to click through to the full editor.

The image shows a screenshot of a web editor interface. At the top is a toolbar with icons for undo, bold, italic, underline, text color, background color, link, unlink, and list. Below the toolbar is a large text area containing the text "This is a test post.". Below the text area is a "Reason for Editing:" label and a text input field containing "It needed editing...". At the bottom right are four buttons: "Save", "Go Advanced", "Delete", and "Cancel".

New Buddy/Ignore List Editor

The new buddy and ignore list editor allows users to be quickly added and removed from your lists, with AJAX-based assistance for name suggestion along the way. If an error occurs such as a user not being found, you can simply correct the error and continue without reloading the page.

Buddy / Ignore Lists

To remove a user from either the Buddy or Ignore Lists, un-tick the box next to their name and click the 'Save List' button.

To add a user to either list, enter their name in the the empty boxes for that list and click 'Save List'.

Show Threads or Posts from Quick Search Popup

You can now choose to show search results as threads or posts without having to click through to the advanced search page.

Receive Private Messages from Buddies Only

You may now select to receive private messages only from users on your buddy list. If a non-buddy tries to send you a message, they will receive an error saying that you do not accept private messages. Administrators and moderators are automatically able to bypass this restriction.

Private Messaging

This forum features a private messaging system, which allows members to send messages to one another privately.

If you do not want to send or receive private messages, you may disable the private messaging system.

☒ Enable Private Messaging

You may limit the members who may send you private messages to just those on your buddy list if you wish. Other members who attempt to send messages to you will be told that you have disabled private messaging.

☒ Receive Private Messages only from Buddies

The forum can send a message to your email address to inform you when someone sends you a private message.

☒ Receive Email Notification of New Private Messages

If you are browsing the forums when you receive a new private message, the system can pop-up a notification box informing you of the new message.

Private Messages: Quota Warning

Once you have reached 90% of your private message quota, you will receive a warning telling you that you have almost reached your quota.

Full BCC Support in Private Messages

A number of you have discovered this by now. Like in an email, BCC (blind carbon-copy) allows you to hide the full list of recipients from each recipient. In previous versions of vBulletin, the "to" field acted like a BCC field. Now, the "to" field acts like the field in an email; each recipient will see all the names in the "to" field.

A demonstration of PM BCC

Message:

This private message was sent to Mike, but Scott and Freddie will also receive it.

Announcements Shown when Viewing New Posts

In previous versions of vBulletin, announcements were only shown when a user viewed a list of threads in a forum. As some users only viewed new posts by clicking the “New Posts” link (ie, getnew), they never saw the announcements. vBulletin 3.6 displays those announcements at the top of the results.

| Search: New Posts | | | | | Showing results 1 to 12 of 12 Search took 0.02 seconds. | |
|--|--|--|--|-------------------|--|--------------------------------|
| Announcement: A new announcement! Kier (vBulletin Developer) | | | | | Views: 0 | |

Combined with this, announcements now include real read marking. They will be considered new until you actually read the announcement, instead of being considered old after a certain amount of time.

Resume Paused Attachment Downloads

You may now resume broken or paused attachment downloads where the browser supports it through the use of the Range HTTP header.
